Sir,

I have the honor to contact you to offer my services for a 5-month internship from early February 2022 in the field of web development or mobile development.

I am a second-year student at CentraleSupélec engineering school. I have specialized throughout my course through my choice of courses, personal and associative projects in computer science and web development. I took opportunities to learn about different front-end technologies through projects on various stacks. These opportunities motivated me to learn and explore the different types of projects that web development makes possible. My experience in the school's IT association has completed my profile to give me a solid culture on DevOps and network topics. More recently, I joined StartX for a 5-month internship during which I was able to discover the culture of entrepreneurship and innovation in Silicon Valley.

Passionate about this fast-paced and exciting environment, I am currently looking for an internship in the SF bay area to participate in projects that have impact and meaning through disruptive technologies. I am trained and motivated for a full stack developer mission. I am also interested in mobile development despite my lack of experience in the field.

I am hardworking and determined. I like teamwork and challenges that require me to imagine new and original solutions. I have discovered through the testimonies of employees and interns the culture of Capgemini and it is an environment of innovation in which I would like to offer my service. Capgemini is a leader in technology innovation, and I want to learn and create in this exceptional environment.

I sincerely hope that my application will attract your attention. I am at your disposal for any interview.

Please accept, Sir, the expression of my respectful consideration.
